OCTOBER DISPLAY

Check out our October Display on Artificial Intelligence and Philosophy on the second floor landing of MHP! Learn about some of the leading journals in the area that you can access through USC Libraries and upcoming related library and Visions and Voices events!

VISIONS AND VOICES: EMOTIONALLY INTELLIGENT ROBOTS
Humans have been fascinated by robots and automata for millennia. There are ancient Greek myths about artificial humans and animated statues coming to life. But as developments in artificial intelligence (AI) and the creation of AI companions and helpers bring these once mythological creatures closer to reality, our perceptions of ourselves and our relationships with others are being fundamentally altered.

Jonathan Gratch, Rachel Severson, and Sidney D’Mello—experts in robotics, cognitive science, and psychology—will highlight the evolution of robotics and AI technologies in an interactive showcase and discussion exploring our increasingly complex interactions and emotional bonds with machines, and what they tell us about what it means to be human.

Come learn about tools and strategies to help you organize and track research and how social media can be used for advocacy.

This webinar will introduce students, particularly in the social and behavioral sciences, to ways we can use Twitter as an advocacy tool. Social media platforms often offer more control, by authors, of the messages sent, more access to the information shared, and more online mobilization of an issue or cause.

Facilitators: Alyssa Brissett & Andy Rutkowski
