

Greetings from your librarian!

Dear Linguistics Faculty:

I'm planning to send a newsletter every two months or so, to let you know what's new in the libraries, and to connect with you about library services and resources. I hope you find this first edition informative.

Feedback requested!

I recently made some big changes to the linguistics research guide on the Libraries' website. Please let me know by emailing me if you have any feedback, particularly about:

- your favorite web resources I may have left out
- suggestions for more resources on text mining and corpora
- if there are any courses or subtopics for which you'd like to see additional research guides created

Looking forward to the spring semester

Thinking about incorporating library resources or information literacy into your assignments or syllabi for the spring? Would you like library instruction for your classes? Would you like to direct students to make an appointment to consult on research strategies?

Email, call, or make an appointment from my profile on the Libraries' website, here:

Did you know....

Because of the way the fiscal year works, I need to spend down funds on linguistics materials by March 2015. Please help me meet your research and curricular needs by suggesting titles of books and periodicals for purchase! You can suggest materials that have not yet been published - I can still order them.

Email me directly or use the Libraries' Recommend-a-Book form.

Some recent additions to the catalog can be found below and on the Linguistics Research Guide.
